

UL 746D certification

UL 746D is an international standard from Underwriter Laboratories UL. This standard defines the requirements for identification and traceability for production of items made of plastic materials with a view to providing fast, reliable evidence about the identification of the plastic material used.

The binding guidelines and in particular the regular checks on them, which guarantee seamless traceability of the plastic materials used from procurement through processing to shipping of the items, are important elements of UL 746D. This applies both to new items and to the use of components of reprocessed materials where permitted.

Monitoring of the UL 746D guidelines

Compliance with the UL 746D guidelines is monitored by means of regular unannounced inspections by UL employees – normally 4 x a year.

This means our customers can always be sure that NORWE only uses the required materials in the agreed quality and also complies with the relevant manufacturer guidelines in terms of processing.

A tradition of quality at NORWE

In accordance with UL, all plastic items used must be made by a manufacturer certified in accordance with UL 746D in order to reflect the process chain for materials and processing.

NORWE has had uninterrupted UL 746D accreditation since 1997 and therefore provides reliable, long-term support for its customers with more extensive UL listing of its electrical and electronic components.

Our specialists will be pleased to provide you with any further information you may require.
